PHILADELPHIAN'S NECK-BREAK-ING EXPERIENCE IN CUBA.

Strung Up Over an Open Well-

Released by Spaniards.

HAVANA, April 23 .- Michael J. Kelly, the Philadelphian, who left Havana a fortnight ago for the insurgent camp and was strung up on a charge of being'a spy, but finally managed to escape, was interviewed on his arrival here to-day. He confirmed the adventure, but was reticent when questioned as to his reasons for going to the insurgent camp. He denies, however, that he had any understanding or contract with the Cuban Junta in New York.

He says that he went out from Havana alone and joined the insurgent forces as an electrician. After a few days he was sent leged mission to meet Sylvester Scovel, who, the insurgents said, had just landed. After the party had gone a few leagues from the camp the sergeant halted his men near an old well, accused Kelly, so he says, of being a spy, stripped him absolutely naked, shot him and, believing that he was dead, put a rope around his neck and hung him over the open well. The rope broke and he fell forty feet. The water was up to his armpits. They then rode away, and about midnight he escaped from the well and walked several miles to a Spanish outpost, where he presented himself entirely naked, with a view of surrendering under the amnesty decree. When the command ant called out to the guard to receive him Kelly was frightened. He ran and was and he was finally caught and taken into the camp. The commandant, on learning why he had run off, and after hearing his story, treated him, Kelly says, with all consideration, gave him tood and clothing, furnished him with a bed and kept him comfortably until the order for his release

Mr. Kelly's head was grazed in several places by bullets, his face and eyes are ourned with powder and his hair, formerly an auburn, is now almost white. the City Will Do.

The opinion of Judge Showaiter in th 3-cent-fare case arrived early yesterday morning addressed to the clerk of the pany and declares the 3-cent-fare law unconstitutional, mainly upon the ground that it is purely local to Indianapolis and is so worded that no other city in this State could ever come under its provisions. By the rule of law thus laid down with regard to the Constitution of Indiana a very large percentage of the general legislation of the State and particularly of that applying to the city of Indianapolis would fall to the

after the opposing attorneys had I that it was in conformity with Judge walter's opinion. Both the city and the State excepted and in noting his exceptions eral entered a denial of the jurisdiction of the Federal Court in the premises. The injunction is very sweeping, restraining the city and all its officers and all its employes and the prosecutor and all his deputies from taking any steps whatever under the law either to enforce it or to prosecute or inflict any penalties for its violation. As soon as the order of the court was entered, Company placed a printed copy of it in the hands of each conductor with instructions to demand 5 cents fare, but not to eject anybody from the cars during the rest of the day. This morning, however, the conductors will be instructed to eject anybody declining to pay 5 cents. The restraining order is temporary and subject to review by the court. The representatives of the city will demand a further will leave nothing undone in his effort to bring the question before the Supreme Court of the State, which he believes should have the final adjudication of it.

THE COURT'S DECREE.

It Enjoins Everybody-Attorney General Denies Jurisdiction.

Below is a copy of the order of the court entered under order of Judge Woods. Both the city and State noted exceptions to it. but their representatives agreed that the order was in conformity with the opinion of Judge Showalter. In making an indorsement to this effect the attorney general enthe Federal Court in the matter. The decree was prepared by Ferdinand Winter and ordered of record by Judge Woods after the indorsements of the opposing attorneys had been obtained by Mr. Winter. The de-
